Or will ye set in heaven that earthly glow Which beams perchance amid a group of sin, And lights to deeds which shun all-seeing day Ah, doubtful guides! how hardly do we win Truths fast-fix'd goal along your dusky way, And heaven and earth by flashes come and go! CXXIV. Out eati. O Glorious Head, tho hid from our dim sight Beyond the veil of the last starry ring, With that pure life, which thou to us shalt bring From the deep adyt of essential light: Thou image of the Father, ever-bright, Not clay and iron are thy feet, great King, But every member is a living thing, Instinct with spirit from thy heavenly might. Though clothed with dust of this vile restless Yet dutys motion, as due rounds it fills, world, Shakes off some portion of that soiling veil: And its indwelling glory...
