The poineer history of Oregon and Washinton comes alive in this beautifully written book by novelist and poet Jana Harris . She animates her compelling story with the richness of the event, the intimate rhythms of everyday life, and the unforgettable voices of her characters . Spanning the years 1853 - 1933 , a time that begins with the ox cart and ends with the airplane , this is the account of Helen Walsh and Thomas Hodgson , whose families confronted the Pacific Northwest , the modern states of Washington and Oregon, when it was still a rugged, difficult , and seemingly limitless wilderness . Theirs is a story of marriage, family, friends . and of dreams and disappointments, in...
