When he returned in the evening and hastened to the coop to see how the fowls were doing, something seemed to be radically wrong. The pullets looked decidedly wobbly and many seemed affected with some strange malady. He went into the basement and saw that the feed bag had not been opened, and, with red in his eyes, he sought his wife. Mabel, he said, did you feed the chickens? Well, I surely did feed the chickens, answered his wife. That s funny, said hubby. The feed bag hasn t been touched. John, said the wife, how you talk! I fed them a whole bucket of feed out of that bag on the ice cooler. Woman, he said, do you know what was in that bag on the ice chest? That bag was full of Portland cement. And he groaned aloud. My goodness, said the wife, then there is some foundation for the purer actions of the chickens. Foundation! exclaimed the chicken fancier. I should say there was foundation. A Portland cement foundation. --Youngstown, Ohio,7Y/cgra-; In the specifications for cement of the Department of Public Works for the Republic of Cuba, it is to be noted that the requirements follow verv much those of the United States Army Specifications, with which Engineers in this country are thoroughly familiar.
